

Are Your Weaknesses Your Real Leadership Strengths?

By: Reginald Winston is CEO of R. J. Winston Consulting

Perfection. That's what we all yearn for: in business, in our personal lives, in the world around us. Raise your hand if you have never had a sleepless night because the next day you had to admit that you made a mistake, needed assistance, or had a lack of skills in some professional area. What's the take away we are all bombarded with on a daily basis? NEVER ADMIT TO A WEAKNESS!

But the reality is great leaders not only admit to their weaknesses, they embrace them. Jessica Stillman (a frequent contributor to Inc.com) summed it up eloquently in June 2016 Inc.com article: "Experts to Business Leaders: Get a Coach Already" (Read the full article). So, which one are you: the leader who stagnates and never reaches their true potential out of ego & fear; OR are you a GREAT LEADER who excels on the strengths of their weaknesses? If you would like to learn more how you can benefit from Executive Coaching, contact us today and schedule a complimentary consultation,

"Leadership & learning are indispensable to each other"

John F. Kennedy

About the Author: Reginald Winston, CEO and founder of RJ Winston Consulting, Inc. has 25+ years' experience in Organizational Development with a focus on Executive Coaching & Training, Team Building, Group Facilitation and Conflict Management. Before consulting, Mr. Winston held positions in numerous large organizations including Ameritech, SBC, Motorola, Advocate Health Care, Corning Consumer Products and the Federal Reserve. In addition, Mr. Winston's service in the US Marine Corps and assignments with the United States Department of State gives him a unique insight in the challenges management teams & leaders face in the expanding global world market. Mr. Winston has extensive experience in working with Hospital Administrators and Senior Medical staff (doctors, nurses and executive-level hospital administrators) in a wide variety of hospital settings and departments. Mr. Winston holds a Master of Science Degree in Organization Development (MSOD) from Loyola University, in Chicago, Illinois.